Values are standards that guide an individual in different circumstances such as on what is right or wrong. They guide our behaviour, decisions, actions and thoughts towards what is right in life. The following picture shows some of the values your child needs to have in life.

Values help children to:

- nurture good habits
- live well with others
- be disciplined
- solve problems
- deal with negative influence

How to support your child to nurture values.

How to find out whether your child is practising values

- observing how your child talks with others.
- paying attention to what your child says.
- checking if your child can tell the lesson from a story.
- asking the teacher what your child says or does in school.
- checking what your child does with friends.

- observing whether your child completes duties given.
- checking whether you child feels free to talk to you.
- finding out the way your child treats others.

Who should support children to nurture values?

Supporting a child to nurture values is a combined effort of everyone.
